Chapel Hill, N.C. – DiLorenzo Studios receives a Telly award, a national competition honoring outstanding video productions that serve as a benchmark for the industry. This is the second Telly Award for DiLorenzo Studios.

The Center for Education, Imagination and the Natural World had just received their non-profit status and were looking to create a presence in the local community. DiLorenzo Studios created a 15-minute Community Identity Video on their program to showcase their work with children, teachers and the natural world. The video directly helped them to receive two more grants to fund their Next Generations Children's Program. It helped educate their local community as well as stimulate global interest. They now have an international presence and a sustainable non-profit. The video featured Thomas Berry a prominent eco-theologian and author of the Dream of the Earth.

“The Next Generation Children's Program video, captured the essence of our work and retold it with simplicity, sensitivity and beauty. DiLorenzo Studios combined a deep intuitive approach with technical skills to create a memorable product.” Carolyn Toben, Director

About The Center for Education, Imagination and the Natural World

Located within the beauty of a 165 acre earth sanctuary, the Center's way of working is threefold: First, the Center offers a setting within which national presenters explore the relationship between the inner life of the child and nature from diverse perspectives. Second, the Center provides a context for teachers to deepen their own personal connection to the natural world and to be co-creators of ways to bring nature awareness to all paths of teaching. Third, the Center designs programs for children, young adults and college students, which call upon their inner faculties of imagination and intuition and enable them to form a bond of intimacy with the natural world.
